

Y13 Learning Journey. Subject: Psychology A Level – Group 13E

Exam Requirements: Your A-level in Psychology is structured, and examined, in the following way:

Component One: Past to Present	Component Two: Investigating Behaviour	Component Three: Implications in the Real World
This paper is worth 100 marks. You have 2 hours 15 minutes to complete this paper. There will be compulsory questions relating to five psychological approaches, five pieces of classic research and the opportunity to explore a contemporary debate. This paper assesses both the basic understanding of psychological assumptions, as well as ensuring the ability to apply these to explain behaviours. Each approach will be included at least once and each assessment paper will cover assumptions, therapies, and classic evidence at least once. Each assessment paper will contain a question on one of the contemporary debates.	This paper is worth 100 marks. You have 2 hours 15 minutes to complete this paper. The focus of this paper is on how psychology collects its data, and you need to demonstrate their ability to apply generic principles to both your own personal investigations as well as to novel scenarios. Extended writing questions will be included here to allow a demonstration of a deeper understanding. Mathematical skills will be tested in this paper only and calculators will be allowed. Section A: Principles of Research Your knowledge of the principles of research will be assessed. The research studies (Milgram and Kohlberg) will be assessed in this section, with at least one on each assessment. Section B: Personal Investigations Both investigations will be assessed (not necessarily with equal weighting). In this section there will also be questions about a novel scenario. You may be asked to undertake calculations. Calculators will be allowed within the examination.	This paper is worth 100 marks. You have 2 hours 15 minutes to complete this paper. This paper assesses three behaviours in detail: schizophrenia, criminal behaviour and addiction. Questions will require you to respond to essay titles highlighting depth and/or range of knowledge, understanding and analytical skills. The final topic on this paper is Controversies. There will be a choice from two questions on the paper and, as the very last question set, is considered to be the most demanding in terms of the skills required.
